TIBCO Messaging

Message Oriented Middleware enables distributed communication that is loosely coupled:

- Components are less dependent on other components, making it easier to replace components when needed
- Operational system continues to run even when some components are not currently connected to the network
- Components within the system do not have to wait for reply messages and can continue to operate (asynchronous)

TIBCO Education Programs